On the heels of a successful SXSW with his GRE team, Vegas rapper So Gaudy unloads a new video (“In My Car”). Just in time for the weekend, So Gaudy gets it lit with clean visual as he rides through the city in a foreign car. While at SXSW So Gaudy performed at an official Street Executives SXSW Tribute show for Bankroll Fresh. His new album is slated for release next month.

“What happens in Vegas, stays in Vegas,” is a saying often used by those who visit. However, native son and hip hop artist So Gaudy wants the world to know that when it comes to him, what happens in Vegas should be told all over the world. Upon arrival at the studio Gaudy plays me tracks from his album currently in stores, ‘Key’s & Tree’s’, 20 cuts all of which have visuals to accompany them. ‘Bitch I Aint’ Broke’, with over 15,000 YouTube views, is the lead track, but its hidden, he explains: “Back in the day rap had hidden tracks that were never really pushed, it was just hidden on the album,” he says. “The album is a mix of a little bit of everything, from hardcore rap to radio friendly jams. “I wanted something that would play in these clubs,” he Sin City rapper So Gaudy returns to kick off the Fall season with yet another project this year, 6 Days Later. The project is a smoked out and slightly leaned out effort that slaps listeners from the gate with intricate production from producer/engineer extraordinaire, Cream.

After performing at SXSW for ViridiKo’s Bankroll Fresh tribute and since releasing two projects earlier this year (So So’s Way, Keys & Trees), So Gaudy has been on a feverish push with fresh content. “We’ve just been trying to stay consistent with the video releases. I think we did a video for almost every song on the last few projects” So Gaudy explained. “This project is a response to some of the people that have tried to ride the wave of my success over the past few years. I cut a lot of people off, I’m more focused, I’m dedicated to the craft and I’ve been stacking my bread with these past few releases.”
